Wanted by the Halifax police: your feedback

Public input. Force asks for the cold, hard truth about first draft of new 10-year strategic plan

KRISTEN LIPSCOMBE
kristen.lipscombe@metronews.ca

Words such as "inefficient" and "reactive" stand out in a collage created from public feedback as part of Halifax Regional Police's draft strategic plan.

There are also terms such as "effective" and "professional" included in the word cloud of citizen opinion on how well officers are doing across the city. Whether negative or positive, police say they're listening.

"We made a conscious decision that we wanted to be very, very open," Halifax Regional Police Deputy Chief Bill Moore said Wednesday of the collaborative process to develop the 10-year strategic plan, entitled the REenvision Project.

"We went out to community groups, we had public surveys, we had internal surveys."

Police want even more public feedback now that the first draft of the plan is complete, and are accepting comments until Aug. 22.

"Does this adequately describe the police force that you would like to see in the future?" said Moore, adding changes have already been made, including to HRP mission and value statements.

According to the draft plan, HRP's mission is now "working together to make our communities safe," the vision is "to be trusted members of our communities," and there are five different value statements.

"We really want to take those and weave them through everything we do," Moore said. "From the people we hire, the way we recruit, the way we expect our co-workers to interact, the way we interact with the community."

A public presentation available online states that in going to the public, HRP "may have gotten more than we bargained for," and "it's clear that there are unmet expectations."

"Sometimes that's hard to hear," Moore said. "(But) we need to hear it."

Autopsy set for puppy killed during break-in

The body of a puppy found inside a Kingston, N.S., home after a break-in has been sent to Truro for an autopsy.

Rosebud, a five-month-old boxer/pitbull cross, was found dead by her owners, Matthew Dominey and Shane Corbin, when they returned home on Aug. 4. RCMP are investigating.

Dominey said the back door of the house had been pried open.

The couple found Rosebud dead in the bathtub, both hind legs broken and a juice jug over her head.

"They didn't take anything," he said. "But they killed the dog."

Dominey said anyone who would kill a defenceless animal poses a risk to the community.

"I can't think of any reason why anyone would do something like this," he said. "It's obviously someone with a very disgusting mind to do such a brutal thing."

Dominey said police told him about the autopsy on Wednesday and he's hoping it will help with the investigation.

The pair adopted Rosebud in March, and the SPCA has offered to cremate her at no charge.

Beef up open-air burn bylaws: Halifax Fire

Tougher rules than province. Propose ban on overnight fires, more than one pile

HALEY RYAN
haley.ryan@metronews.ca

A few months after the province changed its rules on open-air burning, Halifax Fire is proposing the municipality go a step further.

New amendments to HRM's Open Air Burning Bylaw passed first reading in regional council Tuesday.

"Our bylaw in some cases would actually contradict the (provincial) regulations," said Deputy Fire Chief Roy Hollett in an interview Wednesday.

Hollett said residents should check the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) web page to see whether it's a "burning," "restricted," or "no burning" day.

Although the province allows residents to have a fire on the burning or restricted days until 8 a.m., Hollett said they're proposing HRM fires stop at midnight.

"We've proposed to eliminate all overnight burning," Hollett said, adding that while DNR allows for two piles of brush, Halifax Fire is suggesting only one per property.

On burning days, the proposed bylaw states HRM residents could burn brush or use a chiminea between 2 p.m. and midnight, on restricted days from 7 p.m. to midnight and not at all on "no burn" days.

Those in permit-required zones must still print a permit from the DNR website for burning at any time, Hollett said, but residents on properties with no HRM services just need to follow the bylaw.

Hollett said burning dry, seasoned wood is ideal because it keeps smoke to a minimum.

Brush burning in winter is always best as long as you're 75 feet from the property line, Hollett said.

Current regulations

For chimineas and other outdoor appliances:

- Don't place on a wooden deck or combustible platform
- Use dry firewood
- Keep 15 feet from any building
- Only use one at a time

"The risk of a fire getting ... into the forest decreases quite a bit when there's a layer of snow on the ground."

Face injury. Man charged after waterfront assault

A 20-year-old man is facing charges after police say an argument on the Halifax waterfront early Wednesday morning turned physical.

Around 2:30 a.m., Halifax Regional Police responded to the boardwalk near the Waterfront Warehouse. They found a 54-year-old man with serious, but non-life-threatening, facial injuries.

Four men were arrested nearby, including a 20-year-old Sackville man, who faces charges of aggravated assault and breach of recognizance.

Const. Pierre Bourdages said the suspect and victim don't know each other.

Of the other three men, Bourdages said one was released, one was charged with possession of cocaine and the third was charged with breach of probation. METRO

SIRT. Woman breaks arm while being cuffed by cop

Halifax police have referred an incident to the Serious Incident Response Team (SIRT) after a woman broke her arm when an officer was trying to handcuff her.

At 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, police arrested a 51-year-old woman in Dartmouth under the Involuntary Psychiatric Treatment Act out of concern for her safety. She was then taken to hospital.

While the woman was waiting, an officer tried to cuff her for safety reasons, according to a release. In the process, the woman sustained a broken arm.

She is facing a charge of assaulting a police officer.

Because the incident resulted in injuries following police involvement, SIRT has launched an investigation.

Halifax 'just the perfect place to be making films'

Preview. Atlantic Film Festival expands Atlantic Canadian program, highlights local talent

haley.ryan@metronews.ca

From films that made their way to Cannes to flicks with familiar Halifax faces and places, the newly expanded local program for the 34th Atlantic Film Festival (AFF) promises to be "unabashedly" Atlantic Canadian.

Wayne Carter, executive director of the festival, said the Atlantic Canadian program includes 87 films running from Sept. 11 to 18, including the "NextGen Shorts" for young directors and an Atlantic broadcast program.

"(The films) speak about the region that we live in, and ... if you're from here, it's like seeing friends," Carter said.

The Atlantic Gala on Sept. 12 features prominent Halifax director Andrea Dorfman's Heartbeat, starring local musician and poet Tanya Davis in her first movie.

Online

The full festival lineup will be released Aug. 20. Go to atlanticfilm.com for tickets.

"I really love that there's a blending of all the artistic communities in Halifax. It's small enough," Dorfman said after the launch. "There's so much musical talent ... For me it's just the perfect place to be making films."

Haligonians will recognize many real locations in the city used for the film, Dorfman said, as well as a fake music store in the old Turnstile Pottery location on Agricola Street.

Davis's character always wanted to be a musician, but has settled for a mediocre job and relationship. The film follows her journey as she "moves toward her heartbeat" and begins taking chances, Dorfman said.

"It's way different to be standing in front of a camera performing than on a stage," said Davis. "I felt very vulnerable, but I was also really excited."

Regulator closes Deep Panuke gas platform to investigate fire

Electrical accident. No one hurt, no impact on environment: Encana representative

The regulator for the offshore oil and gas industry is investigating an electrical fire on the Deep Panuke natural gas platform off Nova Scotia.

The platform has stopped operations while Encana and the Canada-Nova Scotia Offshore Petroleum Board investigate the cause of the fire.

Board spokeswoman Kathleen Funke said a transformer caught fire on Sunday evening and a sprinkler system extinguished the blaze.

The platform, operated by Dutch-based SBM Offshore, had an electrical fire on Jan. 19, 2013, that also resulted in a temporary shutdown of its operations.

Safety reports obtained by The Canadian Press said a failure to conduct annual maintenance inspections was the underlying reason behind that fire.

The report was one of three that flagged electrical problems aboard Deep Panuke, located about 250 kilometres southeast of Halifax.

Funke said it is too early to determine whether there is any link between the fires and the earlier electrical problems.

A spokesman for Encana also said it is too early to comment on whether the latest fire was similar to the previous incident.

Jay Averill said no one was injured in the fire, there was no risk to the environment and no personnel were evacuated.

He said in an email the company is doing its own investigation to determine the exact cause of the fire.

"All system checks have been completed and, in consultation with the regulator, we have begun the start-up process to get Deep Panuke back on line," he wrote.

Funke said the decision on when to bring the platform back into operation rests with Encana.

"However, the board can supersede this decision if our chief safety officer and CEO do not believe it is safe to operate. The board does not permit unsafe operations at any time," she added in an email.

SBM couldn't be reached for comment.

Wolfville to welcome TV personality Anthony Bourdain

Michael Howell, Executive Director of Devour! The Food Film Fest, announces special guest Anthony Bourdain during a press conference at the Bicycle Thief on Wednesday. JEFF HARPER/METRO

Wolfville will become "the epicentre of epicurean delight" when Devour! The Food Film Fest arrives this fall, mayor Jeff Cantwell said Wednesday.

"When you bring in world-class chefs and world-class critics to a town of 4,300 people, it has an energy that we don't see all the time in Nova Scotia," he said while schmoozing at the Bicycle Thief's outdoor champagne bar.

The Halifax waterfront restaurant, where sparkling wine was flowing and oysters were ready for serving, set an idyllic scene for Wednesday's revelation that culinary television personality Anthony Bourdain will host Devour's opening night Nov. 12. Bourdain is best-known for CNN's Anthony Bourdain Parts Unknown, The Travel Channel's Anthony Bourdain: No Reservations and The Layover and his role as judge on ABC's The Taste.

He's also the New York Times bestselling author of Kitchen Confidential: Adventures in the Culinary Underbelly.

Bourdain picked his favourite foodie film for opening night — 1994's Eat Drink Man Woman — and will both interact with the audience and hold a book-signing. The kick-off gala, dubbed Order of Good Cheer, will also feature 12 of Nova Scotia's top chefs.

"Our 2014 program includes more workshops, more chef collaborations, ... (and) the beginning of a new-found relationship with the Berlin Film Festival," Howell said, with chefs visiting from Montreal, New Orleans and many more.

The full food and film lineup will be announced as part of the Toronto International Film Festival this September, he said. KRISTEN LIPSCOMBE/METRO

Economic performance soft in 2014: Report

A think-tank is describing Atlantic Canada's economic performance so far this year as weak.

The Atlantic Provinces Economic Council says a variety of economic conditions, including labour markets, retail spending and new home construction, have fared poorly across the region in 2014.

Employment dropped in three of Atlantic Canada's four provinces, while national levels grew by 0.7 per cent.

New Brunswick experienced higher unemployment in 2014, but still fell below 2008 levels.

The council says this is partly the result of changes to federal programs, including the Temporary Foreign Worker Program.

Experimental Ebola drug sparks debate

'The responsible thing to do.' Ethical questions raised amid deadly outbreak about who gets access to treatment

The use of an experimental drug to treat two Americans diagnosed with Ebola is raising ethical questions about who gets first access to unproven new therapies for the deadly disease. But some health experts fear debate over extremely limited doses will distract from tried-and-true measures to curb the growing outbreak — like more rapidly identifying and isolating the sick.

A shot in the dark

Scientists stress there's no way to tell if the experimental drug ZMapp really made a difference for two U.S. aid workers infected in Liberia.

- "We don't even know if it works," stressed Dr. Anthony Fauci of the National Institutes of Health.

The World Health Organization is convening a meeting of medical ethicists next week to examine what it calls "the responsible thing to do" about whatever supplies eventually may become available of a medicine that's never been tested on people.

At least one country involved in the outbreak is interested in the drug: Nigeria's health minister said at a news conference that he had asked U.S. officials about access.

There is no proven treatment or vaccine for Ebola, which so far has infected more than 1,700 and killed more than 930 in West Africa.

"How many times have we found magic therapies that ended up ... doing more harm than good?" cautioned University of Minnesota professor Michael Osterholm, who advises the U.S. government on infectious disease threats.

"Vaccine and drug treatment right now is not going to be the main way you bring this to a stop," he added.

Effective immediately. Redford resigns legislature seat amid expense scandal

Alberta Premier Dave Hancock on Wednesday called for the RCMP to review the use of provincial aircraft after his predecessor Alison Redford resigned her legislature seat amid a festering controversy over her travel expenses.

The developments came ahead of the release of the provincial auditor general's report into government travel slated for Thursday.

In a letter published in the Edmonton Journal and Calgary Herald, Redford acknowledged she made mistakes before quitting as premier last spring to sit as a Progressive Conservative backbencher. She said her resignation as a member of the legislature for Calgary-Elbow was effective immediately.

Hancock said there is material in the auditor's review that that police should look at.

"The report identifies a number of areas of concern and I think in the interests of completeness and in the interests of the public being fully satisfied that everything appropriate has been done, that it's appropriate to ask that certain issues in the report be investigated," he said Wednesday in a teleconference with reporters.

Hancock refused to discuss details of the auditor's findings before they are released publicly. But last week, the CBC reported that a leaked copy found that passenger lists on government aircraft were altered so that then-premier Redford could fly alone.

An RCMP spokeswoman said she was limited in what she could say about Hancock's request. Sgt. Josee Valiquette said she didn't believe the Mounties had received an official request yet. She was unable to say what the procedure would be under these particular circumstances.

Railroad responsible for derailment sells locomotives

Dozens of locomotives once owned by the railroad responsible for last year's deadly derailment in Lac-Mégantic, Quebec have been sold at an auction in Maine.

All but seven locomotives were owned by Montreal, Maine & Atlantic Railways, which went bankrupt after a runaway oil train exploded and killed 47 people in Lac-Mégantic.

The auction will help pay back $3.7 million owed to Maine-based Bangor Savings Bank, which had liens on 24 of the locomotives.

The auction was supposed to include the lead locomotive from the train that derailed, but it was pulled at the request of Quebec Provincial Police.

Police should investigate audit findings that the mayor of Brampton, Ont. broke expense rules more than 250 times, including on business-class flights, premium hotel rooms and cellphone IQ quizzes, the city's council voted Wednesday.

In a statement, Fennell said she accepts much, but not all, of what the audit found. Among the Deloitte audit findings, Fennell racked up $220 in cellphone charges for 44 IQ quizzes. Fennell told the auditors the wireless company would credit her account for the quizzes. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mine company ordered to plug tailings pond breach

Likely, B.C. President of Imperial Metals apologized to residents living downstream from the toxic flood

The company that owns a gold and copper mine in British Columbia where a tailings pond burst, sending a massive wave of water and potentially toxic silt into surrounding waterways, has been formally ordered to clean up the site and prevent more material from escaping.

But government officials acknowledged Wednesday they still didn't know exactly what spilled out or how the breach will affect surrounding lakes and rivers, where salmon spawn, locals get their drinking water and tourism operators take their customers.

A tailings pond dam at Imperial Metals' Mount Polley Mine, about 600 kilometres northeast of Vancouver, failed on Monday, sending 10 million cubic metres of water and 4.5 million cubic metres of toxic silt into Polley Lake and Quesnel Lake.

The breach prompted a ban on drinking or bathing in water from surrounding lakes and rivers, which was still in effect on Wednesday, though the company has insisted the water in the tailings pond was safe and the solids that spilled out were "relatively benign."

The province's Environment Ministry announced Wednesday that the company received a "pollution abatement order" a day earlier.

Under the terms of the order, Mount Polley Mine was required immediately take steps to prevent more waste from escaping into nearby creeks and lakes. The company was also ordered to conduct an environmental assessment and submit a clean-up action plan Wednesday, with a more detailed plan due by the end of next week.

The province also ordered the company to provide a detailed assessment of the materials released, including the anticipated impact on the environment.

Company president Brian Kynoch apologized to local residents on Tuesday and appeared to downplay the potential dangers posed by the spill, saying the water released from the pond was very close to drinking water. He added that mercury had never been detected in the water and arsenic levels were low.

Grand Chief Stewart Phillip of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs said the presence of heavy metals in the tailings could be devastating to salmon.

Quesnel Lake and the Quesnel River are considered important breeding grounds for wild salmon, as are other nearby creeks.

"It couldn't happen at a worse time: the Quesnel salmon run is expected to pass by in a couple of weeks," said Phillip.

Craig Orr, the executive director of the group Watershed Watch, said debris could impede salmon migration, while heavy metals such as copper could either kill the salmon or harm the fish.

More than 50 dead following Baghdad car-bomb attacks

Iraq. Densely populated areas targeted by militant Iraqi Sunnis for car-bomb attacks

A string of car bombs tore through busy shopping streets in several Baghdad neighbourhoods Wednesday night killing 51 people as the army announced one of its airstrikes killed 60 militants in the northern city of Mosul.

Baghdad police said the first attack came from a pair of car bombs that exploded in the densely populated Shiite neighbourhood of Sadr City, killing 31 people, followed by another bomb in the nearby area of Ur that claimed an-

Nine more people were killed in the southeast of the city shortly afterward by two more car bombs.

Baghdad has been on edge since Sunni militants led by the radical Islamic State group conquered large swaths of the country's north, including the second largest city of Mosul.

While the fighters have stopped short of advancing on the capital there has been a steady campaign of car bombs in the city.

New 24-hour ceasefire sparks Syrian withdrawal

Some Syrian militant fighters have begun withdrawing from the Lebanese town they captured five days earlier as a new 24-hour ceasefire was announced Wednesday, according to the Lebanese army and the Muslims clerics that mediated the deal.

It is not clear how many militants are actually leaving the border town of Aarsal and previous ceasefires have collapsed, but three more captured Lebanese soldiers were released as part of the agreement, according to the mediators in a televised press conference.

"Most of the gunmen have begun moving toward Syria," said Sheik Hussam al-Ghali, a member of the Association of Muslim Scholars group that brokered the cease-fire in what has been the most serious spillover to date from Syria's civil war.

Lebanon's former prime minister, meanwhile, announced that Saudi Arabia is granting another $1 billion in aid to the Lebanese army to support its fight against militants.

Fighting in Aarsal first began on Saturday when militants from Syria overran the town, which lies near the border with Syria. They seized Lebanese army positions and captured a number of soldiers and policemen, demanding the release of a prominent Syrian rebel commander, Imad Ahmad Jomaa, who was arrested in Lebanon earlier that day.

At least 17 Lebanese soldiers have been killed and another 22 — as well as an unknown number of policemen — have been declared missing.

An initial truce was brokered on Tuesday, but clashes broke out again after the militants opened fire on Lebanese troops the next morning.

A senior Lebanese security official confirmed that the three soldiers were released and said the army has agreed to a new ceasefire to allow for more negotiations and for aid to enter Aarsal. He confirmed some militants were starting to withdraw but the army was insisting all of them leave.

"Our conditions are clear. We will accept nothing else than a complete withdrawal and the release of all soldiers and policemen," he said.

Are we headed towards a robotpocalypse? The future's not ours to see

Que sera, sera.

Experts are split on the impact robots will have on labour by 2025, new study finds

In 2025, self-driving cars could be the norm, people could have more leisure time and goods could become cheaper. Or, there could be chronic unemployment and an even wider income gap, human interaction could become a luxury and the wealthy could live in walled cities with robots serving as labour.

Or, very little could change.

A new survey released Wednesday by the Pew Research Center's Internet Project and Elon University's Imagining the Internet Center found that, when asked about the impact of artificial intelligence on jobs, nearly 1,900 experts and other respondents were divided over what to expect 11 years from now.

Forty-eight per cent said robots would kill more jobs than they create, and 52 per cent said technology will create more jobs than it destroys.

Respondents also varied widely when asked to elaborate on their expectations of jobs in the next decade. Some said that self-driving cars would be common, elim-

No crystal ball here

Aaron Smith, senior researcher with the Pew Research Center's Internet Project, said the results were unusually divided.

- In similar Pew surveys about the Internet over the past 12 years, there tended to be general consensus among the respondents, which included research scientists and a range of other thought leaders.

inating taxi cab and long-haul truck drivers. Some said that we should expect the wealthy to live in seclusion, using robot labour. Others were more conservative, cautioning that technology never moves quite as fast as people expect and humans aren't so easily replaceable.

"We consistently underestimate the intelligence and complexity of human beings," said Jonathan Grudin, principal researcher at Microsoft, who recalls that 40 years ago, people said that advances in computer-coding language were going to kill programming jobs.

Even as technology removed jobs such as secretaries and operators, it created brand new jobs, including

Web marketing, Grudin said. And, as Grudin and other survey responders noted, 11 years isn't much time for significant changes to take place, anyway.

Respondents in this latest survey generally agreed that the education system is failing to teach the skills that students need for the future. Smith said some survey respondents criticized the system for promoting memorization of tasks rather than creativity, teaching a "Henry Ford education for a Mark Zuckerberg economy."

Also, the senior researcher with the Pew Research Center's Internet Project said some respondents concluded that jobs that don't require specifically human traits — such as empathy, ingenuity or resourcefulness — are at risk for being replaced, including low-skill blue-collar jobs or even white-collar jobs that have people performing repetitive tasks.

Respondents offered a few theories about what might happen if artificial intelligence takes over some positions and fewer jobs are created.

Judith Donath, a fellow at Harvard's Berkman Center for Internet and Society, foresees chronic mass unemployment with the wealthy living in "walled cities, with robots providing the labour."

Rover missing? A new phone app could help

This illustration shows how a new smartphone app Finding Rover works. Any worried pet owner who has spent days hanging posters, making phone calls and knocking on neighbours' doors hopes there's a more scientific way to find a lost dog.

That became a reality when facial recognition technology successfully reunited a pet at San Diego County Animal Services with its owners. The website keeps a database of photos from the three county shelters and tries to match eight distinctive facial markers on dogs with images uploaded by users searching for lost pets. Eyes and noses are important areas that differentiate pooches, including eye size and their position near the snout.

Defamation? Hong Kong tycoon sues Google over his autocomplete results

A court has ruled that a Hong Kong tycoon can sue Google over its autocomplete results suggesting he has links to organized crime.

In a judgment released Wednesday, the court dismissed the Internet search giant's objections to tycoon Albert Yeung's defamation lawsuit.

Yeung filed the lawsuit after Google refused to remove autocomplete suggestions such as "triad," as organized crime gangs are known in China, which popped up with searches on his name.

The billionaire's business empire includes an entertainment company that produces films and manages some of the city's biggest celebrities.

He argues that his reputation has been "gravely injured" and wants compensation.

Judge Marlene Ng disagreed with Google's lawyers, who argued Yeung was better off asking the websites where the defamatory information was published to remove it. She said Google had the ability to censor material.

"Any risk of misinformation can spread easily as users forage in the web. The art is to find the comfortable equilibrium in between," she said in her ruling.

It's the latest legal headache for Google over its search service. Earlier this year, the European Union's top court ruled that Google and other search engines must respond to requests seeking removal of links to personal information.

Last year, a German court ruled in favour of a nutritional supplements company and its owner who sued Google to remove autocomplete terms suggesting links to Scientology and fraud.

THE SEVEN LEVELS OF CONCERT HELL

My fellow concert-goers can go to hell.

Each summer I can't focus on the divine bands, the heavenly music, or the right path to the pulled-pork taco stand. Why? Because every concert is overrun with lost souls — empty husks who gorge themselves on watery beer, lurch toward the stage as if nobody else is there, and yell "Whooo!!!" for what are clearly roadies tuning the guitars.

Over the years boorish concert-goers have left me disillusioned and angry. Hell is other patrons.

Fortunately, I had a revelation recently that brought me back from the Dark Side of the Moon. Travelling over The Wall and through the Court of the Crimson King, I came upon the Divine Concert Hall, seven levels of concert-themed revenge that let me know there is Justice For All, eventually. Behold the Seven Levels of Concert Hell. (I know there are normally nine rings, but cutbacks.)

First Circle: The Sulkers. Sin: People who sit scowling, arms folded, because their boyfriend or girlfriend had the nerve

HE SAYS
John Mazerolle
metronews.ca

to grant them free admission to a concert but (sniff) they don't like the band. Punishment: Thrust onto hell's Jumbotron, where they are dumped for all eternity on the "Breakup Cam."

Second Circle: The Spillers. Sin: Concert-goers who slosh beer down your back because they bought a tray of five Coors Light for their buddies in the front row. Punishment: They can order beer, but the plastic cup has a big crack in it.

Third Circle: The Requesters. Sin: Yelling out a request repeatedly despite the band's setlist taped to the stage and a multi-million-dollar light show timed to the music. Punishment: Satan grabs their wrist and whacks their hand against their forehead, saying, "Why don't you stop hitting yourself?" for all eternity.

Fourth Circle: The Talkers. Sin: People who natter like they're providing descriptive video ("HERE THEY COME ... I LOVE THIS SONG! ... SO AWESOME!"). Punishment: Eternity as a mime, in mime hell.

Fifth Circle: The Phoners. Sin: People who endlessly use their phone, especially for selfies while facing away from the stage. Punishment: Drowning in the shallow pool of their own ego while Satan's minions take Instagram photos tagged #YODO.

Sixth Circle: The Blockers. Sin: People who arrive late, then push to the front. Punishment: Access granted to the Pearly Gates, but St. Peter never takes their name because there's a guy in front with a girl on his shoulders.

Seventh Circle: The Singers. Sin: Concert-goers who treat your left ear like it's their shower head, belting out tunes so loud it's like you paid $130 for a pro-am duet. Punishment: Britney Spears without autotune.

That's hell in a nutshell. And I haven't even warned you about the most ironic punishment of all: The least remorseful hell-dwellers must listen to the song Ironie on repeat while a person next to them says, "You know what's really ironic is that Ironie isn't even ironic!" May God (as portrayed by Alanis Morissette in Dogma) have mercy on your souls.

Plight of the Puffin

Tourist help sought by scientists to stop puffin starvation

The Audubon Society wants bird lovers to contribute research to a project scientists hope will help save Atlantic puffins from starvation in Maine.

There are about 1,000 pairs of the seabirds, known for their multi-coloured beaks, in Maine.

Audubon says the number of puffin fledging chicks has declined in the last two years, possibly because their key food source, herring and hake, are leaving for cooler waters. While the puffin enjoys healthy numbers in places such as Newfoundland, they are on the threatened species list in Maine.

Audubon maintains three webcams on Seal Island in outer Penobscot Bay, one of the key puffin habitats in Maine. Volunteers are being asked to watch the birds and answer questions about their feeding behaviour.

"(We're) hoping to advance the science as well as entertain the viewers," said Steve Kress of the Audubon Society. "There are some questions that can be better answered through lots of people viewing."

The two-faced bird

Most people only know a puffin when it is "dressed up" for the breeding season and would hardly recognize it in its plainer winter garb.

- After the breeding season, the adult puffin sheds the colourful plates on its bill and around the eyes and moults the feathers on its head and neck.

- The look is so different that people once thought it was a different species.

There's something to be said for those who go for what they want.

Take Katie Kelly. Young and driven, Kelly is a promotions guru who has worked for a variety of local radio and television stations.

In her current post with C100 and 101.3 The Bounce, she added producing to her resumé when she branched out into Bell Aliant's on-demand world.

Properly prepped and experienced, it was time to press play on her own dream. On June 9, the first episode of her show Pop Culture appeared on the Community One channel.

"I proposed the show, so now I can take it in any direction I like, which is really cool," says Kelly.

Pop Culture is a locally produced show that highlights everything from fashion to fitness, and the direction lies solely in the hands of Kelly.

"I produce it and I can find and pick whomever I want as guests," she says. "What's really cool is that it's completely local, which is my favourite part."

Travolta's private pilot planning tell-all book about 'our little secret'

A man who claims to have been John Travolta's boyfriend for six years is planning to publish a tell-all book about the relationship, the National Enquirer reports. "I'd stay in the room next to John in luxury hotels," Greg Gotterba, who acted as Travolta's private pilot at the time, tells the tabloid. "Sometimes he'd bring women along as beards. But he would ask me to join him in his suite and we'd spend the nights together. It was our little secret."

Gotterba says his relationship with Travolta ended shortly before the star married Kelly Preston.

"I feel sorry for Kelly. She's a lovely person," he adds. "She's in the middle of all this, and it's unfair to her."

No fourth Affleck on way, despite Garner's comfy garb

To be fair, Jennifer Garner has spent a good chunk of the last decade pregnant, so it's understandable that some tabloids would jump to the conclusion that she and Ben Affleck are expecting once again just because she was spotted wearing a number of loose-fitting tops recently. Despite claims by OK! and Star that there's a fourth Affleck child on the way, Garner's rep insists that the reports are "not true."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

I shoulda stuck with movies, O.C. star Barton tells U.K. paper

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Guys, Mischa Barton has some regrets — namely taking the role of Marissa Cooper on The O.C.

In hindsight, Barton tells Metro U.K. that she should "probably not" have accepted the role that made her famous.

"It's something I came so close to not doing. I had a really great thing with film. People say, be grateful for what you have, but it certainly (was) not the kind of thing I was expecting it to be. I've kind of seen it all," she says, punctuating her statement, I can only imagine, with a weary sigh and a drag on a Gitanes.

Two more surprising details emerge from this interview: One, Barton is only 28 years old, and two, she has a tenuous grasp of the English language.

Case in point: "I just like to be seen for the hard-working actress that I am and not for a bunch of extraneous press. In general people are super-quick to harbour on the gossip stuff and less on how much work goes into it," she says. "It's really tough when you are young in this business. People blow a lot of hot air at you."

I ... OK.

Charlie Sheen

Charlie's off the market according to his new ring

Charlie Sheen's fiancée, porn star Brett Rossi, clearly likes it, because she put a ring on it.

Sources tell Radar Online that Sheen has been wearing a "man's engagement ring" at Rossi's insistence. I'm usually against male jewelry on principle, but I can understand her concern. This is Charlie Sheen, after all.

"Brett forced Charlie to wear the wedding band, which he is wearing as an engagement ring," a source says.

"Charlie continues to hang around with other women, which infuriates Brett. It's disrespectful to their relationship, and Brett wants to make it clear that Charlie is off the market."

Whether it's to make it clear to the other women or to Sheen himself, I'm not sure.

Olympic swimming great Michael Phelps, on a comeback that could take him to the Rio Games, is teaming up with a swimwear manufacturer to develop a line of competitive swimming equipment.

Phelps launched his comeback in April after a 20-month retirement as a free agent after his deal with longtime sponsor Speedo expired at the end of 2013.

It currently designs and manufactures swimwear, wetsuits, eyewear, and accessories for triathletes, openwater, and fitness swimmers.

That's one smart cooker. Crock-Pot with app lets you tap in to cook dinner

Belkin and JCS have teamed up on a smartphone compatible slow cooker which can be controlled remotely from the next room, or even the next city.

Slow cooking is definitely moving back into fashion and, over the holiday season, slow cookers were one of the biggest kitchen appliance gifts, particularly in the U.S. However, while they're a great way of making the perfect stew or making the most of beans and pulses, using one can be time-consuming.

The Crock-Pot Smart Slow Cooker uses Belkin's WeMo smart power system and smartphone app so that you won't need to hang around in the kitchen as it comes up to pressure, as its status can be monitored and adjusted simply through swipes and taps on a handset.

As well as the smart features, the Crock-Pot also has traditional manual controls for taking a more hands-on approach and for those moments when the Wi-Fi router needs resetting and the home network goes down.

The Crock-Pot Smart Slow Cooker enabled with WeMo is available to order now in the U.S. for $129.99. AFP

Remote cookery

- As well as being able to fire up the cooker and shut it down again, the app offers control over the temperature and cooking time — great if you're held up on the way home.
- You can pause the cooker and adjust it so that the cooking time coincides with turning the key in the front door.
- The temperature controls also include a warm setting so that something that was cooked the night before can be gently and automatically reheated from a distance.

Give poultry a hint of the exotic with lychee and lemon grass

Lychee and Lemon Grass Chicken. Using fruit to accent dishes offers a whole new taste

1. In a Dutch oven, reduce by half the wine, sake, and lemon juice with the lemongrass. Add the lychee juice. Cool.

2. Heat the butter in a heavy-bottom frying pan. Season the chicken breasts with salt and pepper. Brown them on both sides. Put them into the lychee stock. Marinate for 4 hours on the counter, so all the flavours are infused into the chicken. Add the chicken bouillon to the marinade. Heat to 194 F (90 C), cooking slowly

Ingredients

- 6 tbsp (90 ml) white wine
- 6 tbsp (90 ml) sake
- Juice of 2 lemons
- 4 stalks of lemongrass
- 1 cup (250 ml) lychee juice, fresh or unsweetened canned
- 1/2 cup (120 g) unsalted butter
- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- 4 skinless chicken breasts
- 2 chicken bouillon cubes, homemade or store-bought
- 1 1/2 cups (375 ml) heavy cream (35%)
- 2 1/2 oz (75 g) veloutine or potato starch
- 32 lychees, fresh or unsweetened canned
- 2 oz (40 g) chives, minced

This recipe serves four to six. PIERRE BEAUCHEMIN for 20 to 25 minutes. The internal temperature should be 167 F (75 C). Remove the chicken breasts at this point and keep them warm. Reduce the cooking liquid by half.

3. In a saucepan, reduce the cream by half. Mix cold water with the thickener (veloutine or potato starch) in a separate bowl. Add it, a little at a time, to the cooking liquid to achieve the desired consistency (wait for the boil because the starch only begins to work at this point). Add the reduced cream and adjust the seasoning. Add the lychees and chicken breasts and heat for a few minutes to 194 F (90 C).

4. Serve with rice and sprinkle with chives.

Keep the cherries at room temperature for an hour before cooking so they burst open.

1. Heat 1 oz (30 g) of butter in a sauté pan. Add the parsnips, 1/4 cup (60 ml) of water, salt and pepper, and cover. Simmer gently so the parsnips steam. They are perfectly done when they are fork tender.

2. In a heavy-bottom frying pan, heat the rest of the butter. Add the parsnips, green beans, carrots, and ground cherries. On medium heat, sauté them for 4 to 5 minutes, until the cherries burst open and release their juice. Add the chives.

3. Sprinkle the chervil leaves on top and serve hot.

Ingredients

- 1/3 cup (80 g) unsalted butter

All kinds of fun at Maritime Hobbies

In business for almost 70 years, Maritime Hobbies and Crafts is Canada's oldest hobby and craft store.

Maritime Hobbies has everything you can imagine, plus more. It carries radio-control products, trains, plastic models, kites, crafts, puzzles, rockets "and all kinds of fun little knick-knacks for people," says manager Greg Hatt. "There's never a shortage of things to look at when you're here."

While customers love the variety of product offerings, the customer service is something else that stands out.

The employees are all very knowledgeable as their passion is their profession, meaning they understand what customers are looking for and provide insightful help.

And if Maritime Hobbies doesn't have what you are looking for, the staff is pleased to place special orders.

Since opening in 1946, Maritime Hobbies has always been located in downtown Halifax, and has been in its present-day location for about 20 years.

To find out what the newest products and specials are, drop in to the store, or check out Maritime Hobbies' Facebook page, which is filled with great photos.

Maritime Hobbies is located at 1521 Grafton St., across from the Spring Garden Road Memorial Library, and is open Monday to Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

DOING IT RIGHT WITH TOAD'S

Whether it's a part for a new motorcycle or an antique, such as an exhaust, handlebars, brakes, oil, tires, fabrication, chances are Toad's Cycle Works has what you are looking for.

"We carry a lot of hard to find, rare trinkets," says owner Collin Roach.

In fact, the shop has new parts for motorcycles as far back as the 1940s.

If Toad's doesn't have the part you are looking for, it can most likely get it within two days at a competitive price.

Toad's was established in 1979 by Roach's father, Raymond, who was nicknamed Toad and for whom the company is named.

The staff have various levels of expertise and, as a result, customers receive great advice and friendly service.

Besides parts, Toad's won awards for custom builds under Raymond Roach. Toad's Cycle Works is keeping that legacy alive with its own custom builds.

Toad's is located just 10 minutes away from Mic Mac Mall at 30 Lake Major Rd., which is just off Main Street in Dartmouth. During the summer, it is open Monday to Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Winter hours will be announced at a later date.

DIG INTO DOWNTOWN DARTMOUTH

LOCAL INGREDIENTS TASTE BETTER AND HELP ECONOMY

The local food movement is alive and well in downtown Dartmouth, and it's showing up in different ways, from restaurants to community spaces.

At The Canteen, owner Renée Lavallée is dishing up sandwiches using locally-made ingredients.

"We try to use as much local as humanly possible," she says, rattling off a list of the local suppliers she uses, including Oulton's Farm for meats, Noggins Corner Farm Market for vegetables, and the Speerville Flour Mill for flour, which The Canteen uses to bake its own sandwich breads every day.

Lavallée thinks it's vital to use local ingredients because it helps support the local economy, it helps people reconnect with their food, and it just tastes better.

"I think if it's grown locally and it hasn't been shipped on a truck or a plane for weeks, then it's obviously going to taste a hell of a lot better than if it has been shipped for a long time," Lavallée says.

The Wooden Monkey is another restaurant focusing on using locally-sourced ingredients. While it has been a staple of the restaurant scene in Halifax, it opened another location at 40 Alderney Dr. almost two years ago.

The Park Avenue Community Oven is a volunteer-run, public, wood-fired oven that can be rented out for bookings.

"There is a strong local food movement here," says Tim Rissesco, the executive director of the Downtown Dartmouth Business Commission. "You see it at the Alderney Landing Farmers' Market and the Commu-ity Oven on the weekends, and you see it downtown."

The Park Avenue Community Oven is located at the Dartmouth Common. It is a volunteer-run, public, wood-fired oven that can be rented out. The space is an important community gathering point, as evidenced by its recent use as the Family Picnic spot for a Pride event. Fresh pizzas supplied by Portland Street's Big Life were baked using the oven.

Community supports one another

A cash mob might sound like a bad thing, but it's actually a great thing.

Brenda Dooks knows this first-hand. She is the owner of Uptown Girl Fashion Boutique and Primitive Goose Handcrafts on Portland Street in downtown Dartmouth. Uptown Girl sells a mixture of new and used high-end ladies wear, primitive furniture and craftwear.

This past winter was tough on sales for the business, but a staffer at Weldon McInnis, a law firm on Ochterloney Street, sensed this and organized for a cash mob to hit the business on a chosen day in late May.

A cash mob is a take on the idea of a flash mob, except when people gather for a cash mob, they will spend their money at a designated business. In this case, people committed to spending $20 or more at Uptown Girl.

On the chosen day, the cash mobbers gathered at the town clock where a bagpiper piped them up to Uptown Girl. In total, about 50 people participated.

"After the winter we had, a little cash influx really, really helped a whole lot," Dooks says.

Not only did it provide sales, but it also drummed up publicity for the business and provided an emotional lift for Dooks.

A cash mob descended upon Uptown Girl, a retailer on Portland Street, in late May.

She says the cash mob says a lot about the close-knit downtown Dartmouth business community.

"We pull together to support each other," Dooks says, noting that people in the business community often spread the word to customers about other businesses in the area.

This doesn't surprise Tim Rissesco, the executive director of the Downtown Dartmouth Business Commission.

"The businesses are all pulling on the same rope and are welcoming of people and new ideas," he says. "It is exciting to watch the downtown bloom."

CREATIVE ENERGY AND ECLECTIC VIBE

All it takes is a quick walk around downtown Dartmouth to know it's a creative community. With community art and murals, there is a creative energy permeating the downtown.

Dig a little deeper and you will discover art galleries such as the Dart Gallery on Portland Street and the Craig Gallery in Alderney Landing.

You might even come across some live theatre through OneLight Theatre. OneLight is putting on a multi-arts festival showcasing Aboriginal artists at Alderney Landing Aug. 21-24.

"We are a happening downtown," Coun. Gloria McCluskey wrote in an email. "It is ... a great place to live and work, but if you work in Halifax, travel is so convenient with the ferry and busses right there."

Tim Rissesco, the executive director of the Downtown Dartmouth Business Commission, says something magical is happening in downtown Dartmouth.

"There is an eclectic vibe here," Rissesco says.

"People can try new things, express themselves in new ways and find success in downtown Dartmouth."

Canada has a ray of hope in Raonic

Rogers Cup. Canadian tennis star claws back against Sock to keep Canadian contingent alive at Rexall Centre

Milos Raonic wasn't perfect, but he's still alive at the Rogers Cup.

Raonic had his serve going amid some erratic shots as he came back to beat American Jack Sock 4-6, 7-6 (2), 7-6 (4) on centre court Wednesday night at Rexall Centre in Toronto.

Fans chanted "Let's go Milos" between points, cheering on the last Canadian left in the field. On Tuesday, all four men who played singles were eliminated, and Eugenie Bouchard bowed out in Montreal.

Raonic stunted that momentum with 15 aces that helped offset some struggles in returning Sock's serve. He won 79 per cent of his first-serve points but was broken in the first set to cause the 23-year-old to fall behind.

In the second set, Raonic held serve before blowing out Sock in the tiebreak. He needed another tiebreak to finish off the match.

"There was a little sliver of an opening and I managed to squeeze my way through," Raonic said immediately after the match.

Raonic will face Julien Benneteau of France on Thursday night. Benneteau upset 11th-seeded Ernests Gulbis Wednesday after beat-

Three Nova Scotians called to Maritime HOF

A trio of Nova Scotians will be inducted into the Maritime Motorsports Hall of Fame.

Motorcycle competitor Gary McKinnon, drag racing competitor James (Jim) Morrison and motorsports builder and competitor William (Art) Steeves are three of 10 new inductees to join the hall of fame as the Class of 2014 at a Nov. 16 ceremony in Charlottetown, P.E.I.

McKinnon has been racing since 1971 and last year posted his fastest lap ever at Atlantic Motorsports Park at age 62. Morrison has been racing for five decades and has won more national titles than any other Maritimer, while Steeves overcame a broken neck to keep racing and has officiated the biggest races on the eastern seaboard.

The 10 additional inductees brings the total number of Hall of Famers up to 92, a Maritime Motorsports Hall of Fame news release says.

Duffie named Axemen coach

New Brunswick native Kevin Duffie has been tapped by Acadia University to take on the position of head coach for the Axemen basketball team.

Duffie replaces Steve Bauer, who has joined the national women's basketball program.

"This is about Acadia Axemen basketball continuing to strive to get better," Acadia director of athletics Kevin Dickie said in a news release Wednesday.

Duffie spent six seasons as Acadia's assistant coach in Atlantic University Sport, joining the staff just one year after winning a Canadian Interuniversity Sport silver medal as a student-athlete. He has also served as Basketball Nova Scotia's technical director.

"I believe the program is heading in the right direction," Duffie said in the release. "We have a great group of current players and recruits."

The Axemen, who have made the Final 8 three of the last four years, open their season Oct. 3 at home.

Jays back in the AL East chase

Right-hander Drew Hutchison allowed only a home run and a walk over 8-2/3 innings and Jose Bautista homered and drove in three runs on Wednesday as the Toronto Blue Jays snapped a four-game losing streak with a 5-1 win over the Baltimore Orioles.

Hutchison (8-9) struck out eight and walked one to win for the second time in his past three starts.

A second-inning home run by Chris Davis was the only Orioles hit against him.
